

THAI ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL UPDATE

for August 2023

Highlight:

Thailand's economy continues to recover. The tourism sector improved in line with the number of Thai and foreign tourists. Meanwhile, the manufacturing sector declined in line with the drop in export value. Private consumption and investment slowed down after accelerating last month.

Private Consumption

Private consumption indicators fell slightly from the previous month as most categories declined following the end of the temporary support provided by the election, the postponement of government welfare payments and the acceleration of car deliveries. In terms of household purchasing power, both employment and consumer confidence improved.

Farm Income

Farm income declined due to lower prices for agricultural products such as rubber, oil palm and livestock while total production remained stable.

On the other hand, the permitted construction area in the industrial and factory sector continued to increase, especially in the EEC.

MPI and Capacity Utilization (Cap-U)

Industrial production continued to decline in line with a slowdown in demand from trading partners. However, petroleum production returned to normal following a refinery outage last month.
